

ITALY HAS DEFIED AUSTRIA AND BEGUN BOMBARDMENT OF EUROPEAN TURKISH CITIES; ENGLAND ALSO IMPLICATED BY SINKING MOTOR GUARD

ACTION OF THE ITALIAN FLEET MAY SERIOUSLY COMPLICATE MATTERS IN THE PRES- ENT WAR WITH TUR- KEY.—AUSTRIA MAY ACT.

TRIPOLI SURRENDERED

Commander Gave up After all His Fortes Were in Ruins and His Antiquated Cannon Could Not Defend His Position Any Longer.

London, Eng., Oct. 4.—The menace of international complications which has hung like a dark cloud over Europe, ever since the hostilities began between Italy and Turkey, was intensified today, when it was reported that the Italian fleet under the Duke of Abruzzi was bombarding Provenza
and Nicopolis in European Turkey and further that the Italian warships had fired upon three ships carrying the British flag.

Were Transports.
Two ships fired on were alleged to be transports carrying Turkish troops.
They were captured. The third vessel was a motor coast guard boat reported sunk off Modon. It is believed here while there may be a reasonable explanation for the firing on the British flag, the bombardment of Provenza and Nicopolis is a far graver matter.

Defies Austria.
This, in effect, is a direct defiance of Austria, Italy's hereditary foe. On Monday Austria notified Italy that if she carried war into Europe, Austria would feel compelled to dispatch warships to the Albanian coast.

Known Developments Up To Date in the Turkish-Italian War.

Nicopolis bombarded.

clared.

powers for intervention.

Bagins Bombardment.
Rome, Oct. 4.—An official message states the bombardment of the main batteries of Tripoli commenced at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and continued until sunset. Only the light-house and one of the batteries were destroyed. Care was taken to avoid damage to the buildings of the town.
It is intimated the bombardment will be resumed today in order to completely destroy the batteries.

English Vessel Sunk.
Constantinople, Oct. 4.—Complaint
has been made to the British consul here that the Italians have sunk a motor coast boat flying the British flag, off Modon. Complications with the English government are considered likely.

May Abandon Tripoli.
Discouraged by the failure of all their appeals to the Powers, the Sultan's advisers are said today to be preparing to abandon Tripoli.

Captured Transport.
London, Oct. 4.—A Reuters dispatch
today says that two Turkish transports flying the British flag have been captured near Provenza by an Italian cruiser. The transports had on board 3,200 soldiers and six guns.

Abruzzi Buys.
Paris, Oct. 4.—The Italian fleet commanded by the Duke of Abruzzi, is today bombarding the Turkish port of Provenza, according to a telephone message from Milan. The Duke first commanded the Turks to surrender the three Turkish warships in the harbor,
which they refused to do.

Tells of Battle.
Rome, Italy, Oct. 4.—Vice Admiral Paravoli, commanding the Italian fleet off Tripoli, reports that yesterday's bombardment of the city fortifications continued until sunset. The Turkish batteries replying ineffectually.
He is carefully refraining from shooting the town.

Tripoli Falls.
Berlin, Oct. 4.—Tripoli has fallen
after a most heroic defense by Turkish soldiers in the garrison. With obsolete guns and protected only by the crumbling walls of antiquated fortresses the Turks sustained for hours a terrific bombardment for the Italian fleet. Although they must have known that the fight was hopeless from the first the Turkish troops stood gallantly by their guns. It was only when the forts had ceased to be anything but a pile of ruins the governor's palace had been demolished and military barracks were blazing,

that the white flag was hoisted over the ruined port and the Italians prepared to land.

Laugh at Report.
Rome, (via frontier) Oct. 4.—Official circles ridicule the reports of disasters among the Powers regarding their attitude toward Italy. It is said what is now transpiring was arranged among the states in the triple alliance with the adhesion of France and Great Britain who are bound by the agreement of 1901 to support Italy or at least be neutral whenever she decides to occupy Tripoli. Italy proposes to land 40,000 men at Tripoli within a week and begin operations there immediately. The Turkish prisoners are to be assembled near Caserta and will be well treated.

Issues Warning.
Rome, Oct. 4.—King Victor today
issued an order to all generals and admirals to shed no Italian blood as possible in the Turkish-Italian war. This is taken to believe he sees peace in sight.

Privileges of Travel in Russia.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—It is learned at the department of state

ation of a new treaty abrogating the one now prohibiting American Jews from traveling in that country. Such a treaty, it is said, will be proposed by the new Russian ambassador when he reaches this country to relieve Baron Rosen. The old treaty, negotiated in 1832, has been bitterly opposed in recent years by the influential Hebrews of America.

HAVE BUSY MORNING IN MUNICIPAL COURT

Nine Cases Disposed of in Less Than an Hour.—Seven Drunks Given Jail Sentence.

Wet weather and cloudy skies drove men to drink at least City of Police Applesby reported experience. That there is a close connection between the two, yesterday had an abundance of the right, or rather wrong kind of weather and this morning eight drunks were lined up before the bar in the Municipal Court. Six of these pleaded guilty on being read the charge against them. Two, Christ Wright and George Gilmore, denied the charge. Wright later changed his plea to guilty after Chief Applesby testified that it took three men to carry him into the station. He then pleaded with Judge Filford to let him off and promised to behave himself, but the judge thought it was time he took his medicine and sentenced him to eight days
in the county jail.

A liberal interpretation of the meaning "drunk" is what led George Gilmore to enter a plea of not guilty.
He did not consider himself drunk as he was able to keep on his legs.
Officer Brown appeared as a witness against Gilmore. He had seen him a little after eleven o'clock last night and said that he was undoubtedly intoxicated. Officer Mor-rissy made the arrest. Gilmore was found guilty and fined $3 and costs.
He was not able to pay them this morning and his case was postponed for a week on his promise to send the money. He had been working for Jack Delaney on the waterworks at Monticello and came to Janesville on an errand for his employer. If he was not allowed to return he would lose six weeks' work.

Chris Olson of Orfordville, a Norwegian who spoke English very broken-ly, was among those who pleaded guilty to intoxication. He was picked up at the St. Paul station and had a badly battered nose which he said he had got in a fall. Olson was given five days.

John Reauhan has developed into a rapid-fire repeater. He was arrested about a week ago and was returned to jail this morning for an eighth day's sojourn. He was picked up by Patrolman John Brown yesterday afternoon while trying to pick a fight with a farmer from Avalon on Milwaukee street. Both were taken to the station, but the farmer was released after the circumstances of the incident were learned. The others who pleded guilty were Ed. McGraw, Charles Driscoll, Joe McLaughlin, and Olin Walkley. McGraw and Driscoll were given five days each, McLaughlin six and Walkley eight.

WILL BEER COST A FEW CENTS MORE?

Scarcity of the supply of hops, accompanied by higher prices demanded by domestic and foreign producers for the 1911 crop, which is shorter than for several years, may result in advances all over the United States in the price of beer to the consumers.
The products necessary in beer making have advanced 40 per cent in the last eight months.

This is contemplated as likely to be realized by the public, either in the addition of a cent to the price of each glass, or reduction in the sizes of the glasses.
While the Milwaukee beer manufacturers, which supply many Janesville saloons, have not decided as yet just what they will add to the wholesale prices, Chicago brewers have increased prices an average of fifty cents per barrel. Saloonkeepers of that city during the last few days announced that "schooners" heretofore selling for five cents will now be pushed over the counter for no less than six cents.
Places doing what is known as a "family" trade, purveying largely to the "bucket brigades" in the residence districts, have added a few cents extra for quarts and half gallons so delivered. In the downtown districts the sizes of the glasses have been reduced
all of which compensates the retailers for the greater amount they must pay for their supplies.

These advances in the prices of this beverage are the first indications of the advanced cost of living having affected this part of it, according to the brewers, who have heretofore usually overcome variations in the prices of their product in other ways and enabled their retailers to sell practically the same amounts for the same prices.

It is explained, however, that during recent years there has been more cost continuously added to everything collecting into the gross expense of beer manufacture, and that its increased cost of production must be collected off producers of this as well as other articles of the public's daily consumption.

It is not probable that all the three-teen breweries of Milwaukee will simultaneously adopt a new schedule of wholesale prices now, based on the newly developed conditions they face, which includes conspicuously not only the greater cost of hops, but also of grains needed in the business.

Inquiry of some of the local manufacturers explicitly on this point developed the statement that standard brewers cannot reduce the qualities of their products, having established reputations for superior excellence, and that their only alternative is to increase the wholesale prices. Reductions in qualities of beers, it was explained, might be made by some of the smaller manufacturers.

Milwaukee manufacturers declare there is no combination or trust among them, and that whatever changes may be named in price schedules will be by individual concerns acting independently.

PROMISED LENIENCE; ADMITS HIS GUILT

August Drafaht, Charged With Scattering Rubbish in Street, Changes
His Plea to Guilty.

August Drafaht, arrested a week ago on complaint of scattering rubbish
from his wagon in violation of a city ordinance, changed his plea of not guilty to guilty when he was arraigned before Judge Filford this morning. Drafaht said he did not use any paper fall from his wagon, and did not know that any did fall. The court informed him that if he maintained his plea of not guilty he would have to engage an attorney for his defense, that there were three witnesses against him, and that if he was convicted of the charge he would have to pay the costs of the case as well as a fine. This, together with the recommendation the City Attorney Maxfield that the defendant be given the minimum penalty in case he pled guilty, led Drafaht to change his plea.
He was fined $1.00 and costs, amounting to $2.50. He was not able to pay this at once and an execution for that amount will be held over until next Monday.

The case of Bertha Bickel of Edgerton, who charges her husband, Lawrence Bickel, with abandoning his family, has been postponed for another week. It is expected that a reconciliation will take place.

RUSH AND BUSTLE CONSTANT STRAIN

American Life One to Strain Both Mind and Body.

The rush and bustle of American life is a constant strain on both mind and body. Gradually the human machine wears out under this unnatural strain and nervous debility results.
Statistics show that half the people of the United States are in a run-down nervous condition.

A man or woman in this condition
can get little happiness or success out of life. They feel tired all the time, have no energy or ambition and are gloomy, timid and despondent. They do not sleep well or eat well or feel well and life instead of being a pleasure seems more like a burden.

Are you one of these half sick, half-less, nervous people? If you are you know that there is a tonic now being sold that has brought back the old energy and pleasure in life to thousands who have tried it. The name of the tonic is Tona Vita. It is being introduced in this country by a number of physicians. It has been pronounced the greatest medicine ever before sold to the public. In each city there is an agent for Tona Vita who will refund the purchase price if the tonic fails to give you complete and entire satisfaction. Let Tona Vita build you up and bring back your strength and vitality. You will be

Andrew H. Lowery,
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Footville, Oct. 4.—Word has been received here of the death of Andrew H. Lowery, which occurred at his home in Fargo, North Dakota. The cause of the death, or the length of the illness
is not known by the relatives here.

Mr. Lowery was born in Newark, New York, Feb. 5, 1852. While a small boy he came west with his parents to Wisconsin where they settled in the town of Center. Here he grew to young manhood and then moved to the west,
locating on a farm near Buffalo, North Dakota.

He suffered many of the privations of the pioneer life and for much of the time lived alone. At the end of two years he returned to Janesville and on Oct. 9, 1883, he was united in marriage to Miss Mary Stannard. They returned to North Dakota the same year, first locating at Buffalo, and then removing to Fargo, where they have since resided.

Mr. Lowery has been a prominent real estate dealer in that city for the past number of years and has won the respect of a large circle of friends in the west. He was honored several times with public office and has also been active in the fraternal work.

He leaves besides his wife, three daughters: Mrs. Clifton Rich, and Misses Ina and Frances Lowery, all of Fargo; an aged mother, Mrs. Mary Lowery, of the town of Center; five brothers, David and Evan Lowery of Janesville, Lewis of North Fond du Lac, Herman of South Dakota, and Frank of Footville; also three sisters,
Mrs. George Townsend of Magnolia,
Mrs. Fred Thompson of Chicago, and Mrs. Charles Stewart of Janesville.

The remains are expected to arrive

Here's a Base Burner That Gets All the Heat from Every Piece of Coal You Buy

Hold a thermometer next the chimney of your Base Burner. Unless you have a FAVORITE Base Burner, you will find that the chimney is very hot. This means that from one-half to two-thirds of the heat is escaping up the chimney.
You are getting but half the heat from your coal that you ought to get.

You want a Base Burner that will empty the heat into the house instead of out through the stove pipe. There is only one Base Burner that completely does this. That's the Favorite Base Burner.

There is enough
actual heat produced
by the coal you burn
to warm every room
in the house.

With a Favorite Base Burner all this heat comes pouring
into the room and you can have your home as hot as you want it on the coldest
day of winter.
The house is made to feel like home to your wife all day long. You may be at work but you will know that your family is comfortable.
When you get back
at night you will find the entire house opened up and warmth everywhere.

And it costs less than your Old Base Burner did.
The Favorite Base Burner is the best made, most tightly constructed and handsomest heating stove. It is made by expert stove makers—not ordinary workmen—who make every part carefully and plane and mill the doors and registers until they fit paper-tight.
This careful attention to detail and the wonderful five flue system is what makes the Favorite Base Burner the most economical heater in the world.

SEEKING CONTROL OF THE BUTTER PRICES

Wisconsin Creamery Men Would Capture the Control of Elgin Butter Board.

Wisconsin creamery men have banded together to secure control of the Elgin board of trade at the next annual meeting in December, according to reports reaching Elgin from Wausau. If they fail, it is understood they will start a butter board at Wausau. Wisconsin buttermakers say the Elgin board is controlled by speculators and commission men and is no longer a producers' market, and that Wisconsin, producing twelve to fifteen million pounds, should have charge of fixing the price.

"THE GAY MORNING GLORIES."

"The Gay Morning Glories" are billed to appear at the Myers Theatre on Wednesday night, Oct. 4. This is considered to be the very best of the larger burlesque shows, and promises an entertainment that will be both lively and interesting. Like all attractions of this character, a lavish display of handsomely costumed girls, witty comedians and catchy music are its principal factors, combined with several new and startling sensations to add to the variety.

TRIBUTE TO BASCOM PAID BY VAN HISE

President Van Hise of State University Comments on Death of His Predecessor.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., Oct. 4.—"The news of the death of Dr. John Bascom will come as a personal sorrow not only to the older members of the faculty, but to the alumni who were students during the period of his presidency," said President Charles H. Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin, commenting today upon the sudden death of Dr. Bascom at his home in Williamstown, Mass.

"While Dr. Bascom was president of the university the preparatory work was discontinued, and in the institution there was developed a strong college of liberal arts which has remained to the present time the very heart of the institution. Those who were his students, and I am among them, treasure the remembrance of his potent influence. The persuasive, mastering, moral power of John Bascom he in a measure wrought into every graduate during the days of his presidency. His students came to believe and share in his high ideals, inspired by his burning enthusiasm. The idea of service to the state and nation instilled into them they have retained as a controlling motive to the present day."

Dean E. A. Birge of the College of Letters and Science of the university, in speaking of Dr. Bascom's great work for the university and the state, said: "In the thirteen years of his service, his presence and influence molded the inner character of the university, as has been done by no one before or since his time. This institution owes to him a far greater intellectual and spiritual debt than to any other one man. Still more, the social and political temper of the state of Wisconsin has been deeply affected by him; partly by his influence while here, still more, through the alumni who carried with them into the state some of his spirit, as shown in his classes and in the conduct of the university. No single personal influence has ever more deeply or more permanently shaped the life of a great university and the larger life of a great state than did that of Dr. Bascom. The University of Wisconsin and the State of Wisconsin live and always live on a higher plane because of his life and work with us."

Catarh and Blood Disease—Doctors Failed to Cure.

Miss Mabel F. Dawkins, 1214 Lafayette St., Port Wayne, Ind., writes: "For three years I was troubled with catarh and blood disease. I tried several doctors and a dozen different remedies, but none of them did me any good. A friend told me of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I took two bottles of this medicine and was as well and strong as ever. I feel like a different person and recommend Hood's to any one suffering from catarh."

Helping to Make Happiness.

MOST of us are seeking happiness, though we pursue it by different paths. And sometimes, when we come to the end of the road, we find it has eluded us, and we wonder sadly as we think over the path we have travelled, that if we had turned off at a certain signpost and taken another road, would we have been more likely to find that which we are seeking.

The man who pursues wealth often discovers when he has acquired his millions, that they have not brought him the happiness he desires. The man who has given all to ambition frequently has realized that with his ambitions fulfilled, he still has not happiness. So those still in pursuit of it, as they look at those who should have achieved but have not, pause, puzzled, and wonder if after all they too will fall to secure what they seek.

Looking at those who have pursued and are pursuing happiness, it would seem as if there are no sure directions for securing it. But there does seem one way to help make it. We may not have all of happiness by this method, but it does seem as if we may have a goodly share.

Happiness is a state of mind. And when we are manifesting good, when we are at peace with the world, we are happy. The man of millions is happiest, not when he is thinking of his possessions, but when he is enjoying some material pleasure as the result of them, but when he has done some good because of them, when he has made some one happy, because it has been in his power to do so.

When we let good flow into us from its great reservoir in the universe, and when we show forth this good again in the form of love, or truth, or honesty or kindness, we are happy. Even the lowest, most sordid will acknowledge this. No one is so altogether base as not to feel a glow of happiness when he is doing good. It is so common an experience as to be self-evident.

So it would seem that one sure way to be happy is to manifest good, to open our heart and mind and soul to it, and to let it flow forth to others.

And if we all did this, the world would be a happy place. And if each of us did our part, this state of affairs would come to pass.

Good is in the world as a great force. It will become a part of us if we will make a place for it. And if it is a part of us, we can not help but show it forth. So we make for our own happiness and the happiness of others when we let love and truth and kindness and all that go to make up the sum total of good become a part of us, and by reflection shine into other lives and brighten and gladden them.

So if happiness has not yet been secured by the methods pursued, try this little recipe and see if it does not hereafter abide with you.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

THIS, they say is the greatest physician in the world for the sickness of grief.

But there is another healer whose power to heal not only heart but mental sickness, it seems to me, is not half realized. That healer is "Change"—change of scene, change of the objects of your thought, change of the objects of your vision, change in every way possible.

I know a girl who was made a complete nervous wreck when her lover deserted her to marry another on her wedding eve.

Everything about the house reminded her of him, and the preparations they had all been making for months for the wedding, so the doctor advised that she go away, or that the whole family move with her to some other locality. Neither of these things was practicable and for a time it seemed as if she would lose her reason. Finally, her mother conceived the idea that if they could not change from the house they might change the house. She persuaded her daughter to go away for a week, and during her absence, prepared the living room. In spite of herself, the girl, on her return, was interested in the change, and was gradually persuaded to take an interest in some other similar changes. Before they got through they had prepared almost the whole house, and completely changed the arrangement of the furniture. Her interest in the world, and the curative effect of seeing new things which did not so much suggest her unhappy experience, the doctor declares, saved her reason if not her life.

One of the most terrible losses I ever know of, was that of a couple who lost their two grown sons—the only boys in the family—in a railroad accident. They found it absolutely impossible to endure the continual reminder of the old house and after a year or two built a new home in a different part of the town. No one who saw them absolutely crushed and continually possessed by their grief in the old home and gradually beginning to take an interest again in the new, can doubt for a moment but that the change prolonged their lives ten years.

Of course there are like changes—changes that cost much money, changes that are not within the reach of everyone, no matter how great the need. But even little changes often help much.

A woman who has been ill so much that the aspect of her chamber has grown hateful to her showed me the other day that she had moved her bed into a different position. "And you don't know how I enjoy it," she said. "It just makes it seem like a completely new place. I don't mind lying abed now half so much as I used to."

I remember myself a night when after such a sleepless night of pain that I fairly dreaded to enter my chamber. I tried the experiment of sleeping in a room in another part of the house, and had my first good sleep for a week.

The power of association to keep the shadow of grief or unhappiness or pain upon us is greater than most of us realize.

Break the chains of sadness and you will often break the chains of sorrow and suffering.

And besides its power to prolong pain, I believe that monotony of scene and thought is dangerous in itself.

Ruts cause more nervous than anything else on earth.

You are dull or nervous or fretful or tired or languid, and you fancy it is rest you need, but half the time it's just change.

Go out and see something or someone new; bring something or someone new into your home; find something new to think about, and I promise—well, perhaps not a cure, but at least an alleviation.

Continued Use.

IT is a fallacy both in mental and physical education to lay too much stress on youth as a condition of learning. Instead of emphasizing the limitations of age, we should emphasize the continued power for growth and improvement.

For example, educators tell us we are not able to learn a language perfectly after we are fourteen. How much more important to emphasize that for all practical purposes a language can be learned at any age. Men and women come to this country at forty, yet at sixty years of age, and get a better speaking knowledge of a new language in a year than college students get in four.

The bicycle is a good illustration that so long as the physical powers are not impaired, age is not a limitation to the ability to learn a difficult feat. Presented as an abstract proposition you could not have convinced the world that any but professional gymnasts could learn to ride such a curious looking machine. But when experience demonstrated that it could be done, and the bicycle craze was on, men and women of advanced years tried it and learned to ride with confidence and ease, little thinking what a serious test it was of strength and skill.

The pianist preserves the flexibility of his fingers, the dancing master of his legs to old age, because of continual use. Our intense absorption in the one thing we do makes it absolutely necessary to take some general exercise, each day to call into action the whole body if we would keep it normal. Old age, as it relates to the body, is the bending form, stiffening joints, loss of elasticity. If only a few moments are spent each day in keeping the machine oiled, repaired, ready for use, how much longer it lasts than when allowed to grow rusty from disuse.

HOW HOBBLE SKIRTS CAUSE ACCIDENTS

High Heels and Hobble Skirts Get Wearers Into Trouble While Travelling.

High heels and hobble skirts are responsible for a large portion of the injuries sustained by women while getting on and off trains and mounting and descending stairways in stations. The Pennsylvania railroad in three months had seventy-three such cases. The reports read: "High heels caught while descending stairs, wore hobble skirt," etc. And the claim agent, with all his philosophy can only sigh and observe that "women at all times have followed styles that are dangerous to life and limb."

FALL PICKLING.

In almost every household there are old and valued recipes which are handed down from mother to daughter, recipes so choice that it is an especial favor to have one given you. Here is a valued recipe for fall pickles: Take forty cucumbers three or four inches long, put into salt water strong enough to hold up an egg, a handful of dill seed or six large sprays of fresh dill, and a dozen grape leaves. Put a layer of grape leaves in the bottom of a jar and add the cucumbers and brine with the dill. Cover the top of the jar with several layers of grape leaves and let stand a week, when the pickles will be ready to use.

Tomatoes for Meats.—Chop fine sixteen ripe tomatoes, four small onions and a cupful of celery, add three tablespoonsful of salt, one cupful of vinegar, a cup of sugar and cayenne pepper to taste. Place in a sterilized jar and seal without cooking.

Chow-Chow.—Prepare the following vegetables and cut in small pieces: Two quarts of green tomatoes, twelve small cucumbers, three red peppers, one cauliflower, two bunches of celery, one pint of small onions, two quarts of string beans. Mix together a fourth of a pound of mustard, two ounces of tumeric, half an ounce each of allspice, pepper and cloves and a gallon of vinegar. Cover the vegetables with salt and let stand twenty-four hours. Heat the vinegar with the spices to the boiling point, add the drained vegetables, cook until soft.

Green Tomato Pickles.—To a peck of sliced green tomatoes add half a dozen onions and a cup of salt; let stand over night and drain; add two quarts of vinegar, two cups of brown sugar, half an ounce of cloves and one of cinnamon. Cook all together until the tomatoes are a little soft, not too tender, then put away in a stone jar after adding a freshly grated horseradish. These will keep a year or longer.

Chili Sauce.—Peel twelve medium-sized tomatoes very ripe, one finely chopped red pepper, one onion chopped, two cups of vinegar, three tablespoonsful of sugar, a tablespoonful of salt, two tablespoonsful each of cloves, cinnamon, nutmeg, and allspice. Heat slowly to the boiling point and cook two and a half hours.

DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN, Food Specialist.

HIGH PROTEIN DIET CAUSES DISEASE.

A woman under middle life who was obliged to adopt a very low protein diet on account of a serious malady caused chiefly by an excessive protein diet, found it extremely difficult at first, but after less than two months is perfectly satisfied with a meal of dried peaches (soaked twelve hours, not fired), or figs, with an exclusive meal of cracked wheat once or twice a week (soaked twelve hours and then brought to the boiling point). The demand for the extreme mixtures of highly seasoned foods and for a great excess of the protein element as furnished in meat and eggs, is unnatural and in the case of persons past middle life is certain to induce serious disease if exercise is neglected and the mental strain is excessive. It is much better to modify the diet before the advent of malignant disease than after, but this should always be done without delay when there is any reason to suspect disease. Persons living on a low protein diet are much less liable to suffer from injuries as was shown in the quick recovery of the Japanese in their war with Russia.

THE SAUCY QUILTED HAT.

New York.—One of the smartest novelties, offered for early Fall wear is the quilted hat. Its popularity may be traced to the introduction of the English Walking Hat, last season. These new hats are usually in velvet or corduroy—either plain black, or pure white, with cord and tassel, or the opposite extreme as the note of contrast.

The model here shown has a loosely crocheted cord of coarse white yarn, with white knitted ball ends. Tiny ornaments of white feathers, in fancy wings, rest amid rosette effect, also appear to good advantage on black quilted velvet hats. Hats of quilted white cashmere, with an underlacing of plaid silk, are also smart, though not as practical as the simple black velvet. These hats are ideal for wear with plain tailored costumes. EMBROIDERED READED AND SIDE-LACED SHOES.

New York, N.Y.—The rage for embroidery and beading pervades the fashionable toilette from the headband which completes the coiffure, to the toe of the dainty boot. Among the most extreme novelties in footwear are shoes of satin, with embroidery in heavy silk, upon the toe. The graceful sprays, extending around the side of the front vamp. This embroidery being executed in self-tones is not conspicuous. And on a small, prettily formed foot, not objectionable. A still more fanciful adornment of footwear may be seen in the beaded, bronze boot, here illustrated. This is a high-topped, French-heeled, dress shoe, in bronze kid, finished with brown pearl buttons. Down the center front seam, and at either side, runs an open work pattern of heart-shaped motifs, outlined and elaborated with bronze beads. This open work gives something of the daintiness of a low shoe or slipper, while providing greater comfort to the ankles in chilly weather. Another smart fancy, in footwear, is the plain satin shoe, without vamp or tip, lined up one side, with silk ties.

WOMAN'S CLUB HOLDS ITS FIRST MEETING

Met Yesterday Afternoon in Church Parlor of Congregational Church—Program Given by Mrs. Chas. Capwell of Racine.

The Woman's Club of the Congregational church met for the first time this season in the church parlors yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Charles Capwell of Racine gave a program of readings. The first were three original stories in the Irish brogue entitled "The Woman," "The Beauty Doctor," and "The Corner Grocery." The following numbers were a monologue in the German dialect called, "Woman's Rights," a short "Canadian Poem," and "A Character Sketch From Life." Mrs. Capwell is a very gifted reader and her selections were well given. The social committee served refreshments. The attendance was good. Hereafter the Woman's Club will hold their meetings twice a month on Tuesdays. The first meeting in the month will be for a social time or lecture and the second for business.

UP-TO-DATE HOUSEKEEPING

What Experience Proves the Fireless Cooker Capable of Doing.

BY ALICE E. WHITTAKER.

At a recent meeting of a dozen club women it was learned that nine out of the twelve owned fireless cookers and all had passed the stage of experimenting with them. This may be more than the average of housekeepers to take advantage of this modern help in cooking and it would be interesting to know just how much assistance each of these women received from her "fireless."

When the fireless cooker was first offered as a kitchen help the majority of women looked upon it as little more than a cereal cooker and also a convenient utensil for cooking a large piece of meat like a ham. The manufacturers set women to studying different ways of using it, the cooking teachers became interested in it, bright housekeepers made discoveries and now demonstrators are sent out to give instruction in its use.

As everybody now knows the cooker is a box with double walls filled closely with a non-conducting material so that anything that is at or above the boiling point, when placed on it, will continue to cook for several hours. The cookers are now fitted with plates made of metal and stone composition that are to be heated and thus increase the cooking power. Some valuable improvements are sure to come in this useful invention, but even as it is, it saves time and fuel.

The fireless cooker is invaluable in cooking both dried and fresh fruits. For jelly making it produces a jelly exceptionally clear as the fruit is not broken as when cooked rapidly on the range. With the ordinary range, potatoes to serve with a leg of mutton should be put on to cook about half an hour before the meat is to be done. In the fireless cooker both may go in at once as the potatoes will not be overdone, for experience shows that starchy vegetables cook more slowly in the fireless cooker than other foods.

Brown bread and various puddings are steamed in the best manner in the usual molds set inside of one of the cooker kettles containing boiling water and with its cover tightly clamped down.

Any meat, including ham, that is to be served cold and has been cooked in boiling water in the cooker should be cooked in the same water. This prevents the surface from drying, hardening and casting like a chip, for the meat re-absorbs some of the moisture it has parted with in the cooking. It is possible to overcook meats in the cooker if left in too long, but cereals for instance, or foods steamed in a mold, may stand in it for hours and even be improved.

When a novice asks if you can have a good brown roast of beef in the cooker you must explain that roasting is cooking by near contact with live coals or a flame and that baking, the modern substitute for roasting, is cooking by means of dry hot air which browns the surface of the food.

In the fireless cooker there is no evaporation of water and the moisture coming from the juices of the meat prevents browning. Therefore while the meat is made tender and palatable it is more of the nature of a pot roast. This condition is changed a little by lifting the cover a few seconds about half an hour after the meat is put in. To overcome this excess of moisture and thus increase the usefulness of the cooker, one kind is made so that the steam will escape if a dry heat is required.

Beef is better if well seared over in a hot frying pan before it is put into the cooker. This is customary even for oven cooking as it tends to keep the juices in the meat and not in the gravy. When potatoes or a pie or pan of biscuits are put into the wire baking basket that rests between the two hot plates, there will be no browning of the skin or crust, unless the cover is lifted quickly in about six minutes after the cooking is started to allow the steam to escape, then closed again securely.

When an oven is convenient there is little to be gained in using the cooker for baking bread, cake, etc., but if the cooking arrangements are limited to a fireless and a gas or alcohol stove it is possible to bake foods made from flour and have them well done.

One excellent way to cook chicken or fowls is to cut it in pieces as for fricassees. Dust each piece with salt, roll in flour and lay on a round pan, dot with butter and slip the tin into the wire basket. Put one hot plate into the cooker on an asbestos mat, set the basket in and a second plate on top, then close the cooker. Even a bowl will be tender and the pieces will brown put in to cook. A slice of round steak is cooked in an hour in the same manner and to either chicken or meat there will be a tasty gravy.

Janesville Has to Bow to the Inevitable—Scores of Citizens Prove It.

After reading the public statement of this representative citizen of Janesville given below, you must come to this conclusion: A remedy which cured years ago, which has kept the kidneys in good health since, can be relied upon to perform the same work in other cases. Read this:

Mrs. William Mohs, 310 N. Academy St., Janesville, Wis., says: "About two years ago I had an attack of kidney trouble and at that time I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at the People's Drug Co. The use of only two boxes cured me. Other members of my family have taken Doan's Kidney Pills with satisfactory results and I therefore know this remedy to be a reliable one." (Statement given in August, 1908.)

The Benefit Lasted. Mrs. Mohs was interviewed on September 23, 1910, and she said: "I gladly confirm my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. They permanently rid me of kidney complaint and during the past two years, I have had no further need of a kidney medicine."

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

WHAT IT COST TO DISCOVER AMERICA.

By A. W. MACY.

It is difficult to make an accurate estimate of what it cost to discover America. All the documents agree that the total expense of fitting-out the three little vessels with which Columbus sailed was 1,140,000 maravedi, but the difficulty is to ascertain the value of that coin at the time. A maravedi is a small copper coin of Spain, supposed to be worth about three mills of American money. The coins of a country usually decrease in value as the country grows older, and some authorities claim that in the time of Columbus a maravedi was equal to seven mills. If such was the case, the expense to the Spanish government was about $8,000. Of course the pay of the officers and crew should be included, but that was not excessive. The annual salary of Admiral Christopher Columbus was equal to $320 American money; of the three captains, $192 each, and of the three pilots, about $140 each. The sailors were paid at the rate of $275 a month. The ship's physician could not have been considered a very important personage, as his salary was equal to $38.50 per annum.

An Extravagant Man. A Chicago man was fined ten dollars for kissing his landlady. It would have been cheaper to pay his board bill.

GOLD DUST

makes dish water that digs

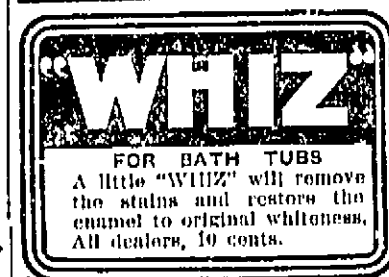

Gold Dust offers the shortest cut from the drudgery of dish washing. Just a little Gold Dust shaken in your dish water will remove the grease and dirt.

Gold Dust digs deep into cracks and corners—purifies and drives out every bit of dirt or hidden germs which soap and water will not reach. Gold Dust sterilizes as well as cleans.

If you spend two hours a day washing dishes, Gold Dust will enable you to save one hour—and your dishes, too, will be spotlessly white, wholesome and sanitary.

Gold Dust is sold in 5c and 10c packages. The large package means greater economy.

"Let the GOLD DUST TWIN do your work."

ACKNOWLEDGE IT.

Thought for Today

BY MRS. ROBERT N. LAPOLETTE.

CONTINUED USE.

IT is a fallacy both in mental and physical education to lay too much stress on youth as a condition of learning. Instead of emphasizing the limitations of age, we should emphasize the continued power for growth and improvement. For example, educators tell us we are not able to learn a language perfectly after we are fourteen. How much more important to emphasize that for all practical purposes a language can be learned at any age. Men and women come to this country at forty, yet at sixty years of age, and get a better speaking knowledge of a new language in a year than college students get in four.

The bicycle is a good illustration that so long as the physical powers are not impaired, age is not a limitation to the ability to learn a difficult feat. Presented as an abstract proposition you could not have convinced the world that any but professional gymnasts could learn to ride such a curious looking machine. But when experience demonstrated that it could be done, and the bicycle craze was on, men and women of advanced years tried it and learned to ride with confidence and ease, little thinking what a serious test it was of strength and skill.

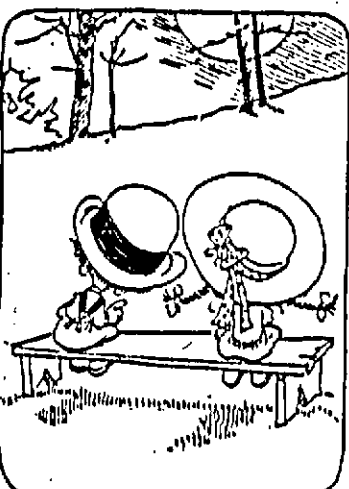

The pianist preserves the flexibility of his fingers, the dancing master of his legs to old age, because of continual use. Our intense absorption in the one thing we do makes it absolutely necessary to take some general exercise, each day to call into action the whole body if we would keep it normal. Old age, as it relates to the body, is the bending form, stiffening joints, loss of elasticity. If only a few moments are spent each day in keeping the machine oiled, repaired, ready for use, how much longer it lasts than when allowed to grow rusty from disuse.

COULDN'T LIVE LONG.

Wigson—I guess that is about right. She is worth over a million.

SAME OLD STORY.

She—I'll bet you've said the same things to a dozen girls on this same bench.
He—I ain't, neither. This bench's only been here a week, so there!

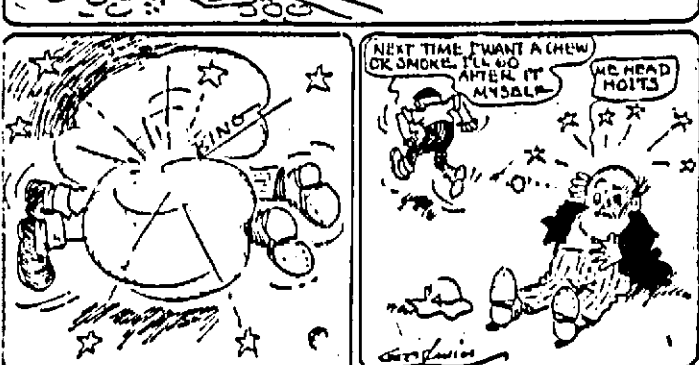

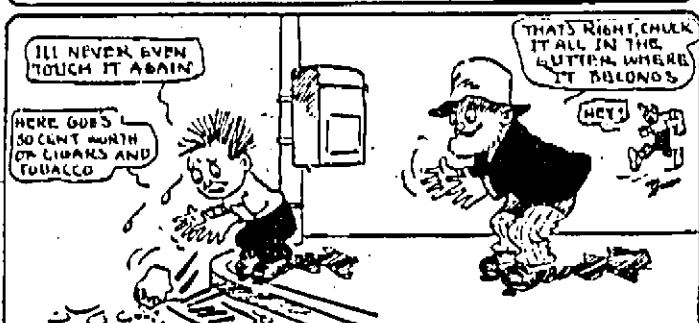

Sarcasm.

I'm waiting for some chump to ask me if I think the hot.
And then I'll smile with all my might and say, "Of course it is not!"

DANKON NEWS

Easing a Cough.

For children who have passed the baby stage, linseed tea is the best thing known to ease a cough. Pour two quarts of boiling water on one ounce of whole linseed and twelve drachms of licorice root sliced. Add to this a slice or two of lemon. Let this stand in a jug covered over for six or seven hours, then strain it and sweeten to taste and it will be ready for use.

The Voice of the Jokester.

"What a far bankhand is."
"Why do you say that?"
"He has just got home after having been away on a four weeks' trip with his wife and three children, and he claims that he enjoyed himself."

Uplift in Russia.

Even the submerged Russians are lifting their heads to the better fruits of the industries of civilization. In fifteen years savings banks' holdings have risen from $235,000,000 to $450,000,000. Little by little, too, the Russian bonds, which had been sold abroad, are flowing back to the subjects of the czar.

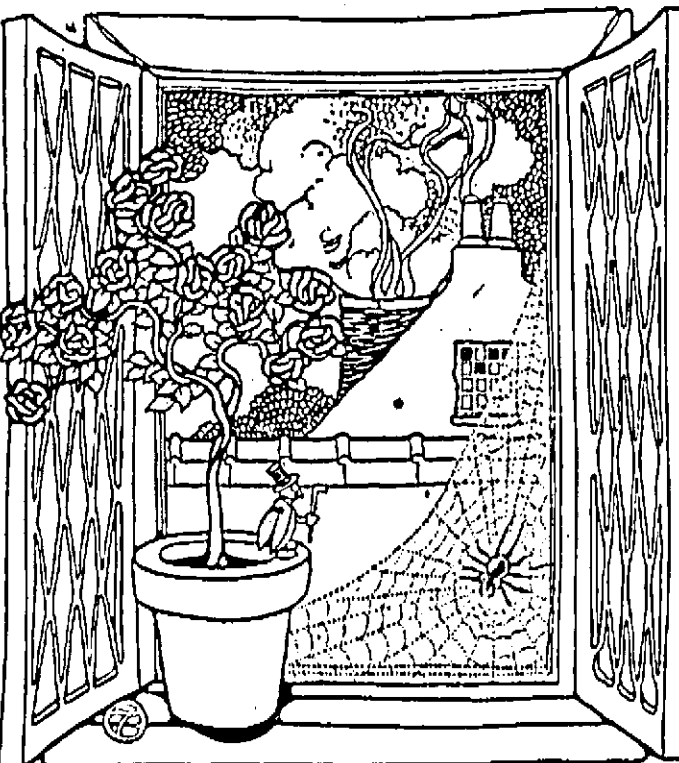

True Saying.

"I suppose you find that a baby brightens up the house," said the bachelor to a friend who was showing off the first baby.
"Yes," was the semi-end reply, "we burn twice the gas we used to!"

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Gazette, Oct. 4, 1871. Brigham Young was too ill to appear in court yesterday morning, and his arraignment is, therefore, postponed. He remains at his residence in custody of United States deputy marshals. The arrest has caused some sensation, but no popular excitement. Our morning dispatches announce trouble in the Democratic convention at Rochester, N. Y. Tilden is determined to exclude Tammany delegates, while Tweed differs with him on that point and insists on their acceptance. Violence is anticipated and it is rumored that the citizens of Rochester have called on the mayor for military protection. A large portion of Helena, Mont., is in ruins, the result of a disastrous fire that occurred there the 2nd inst.

This total loss is $700,000 and is only partly insured. It was with great difficulty that the remaining portion of the town was saved. A bear visited the corporation limits of Richland Center last week and escaped unharmed. Anderson, Harvey and Company have the contract for building Watson's new block and James Harris' new residence. A Democratic meeting was called last night at the council rooms. "Awful silence" reigned and the Times editor was distressed again. E. D. Coe of the Beloit Journal was with us for a few minutes yesterday afternoon. Frank Allen, editor of the Stoughton Reporter, favored us with a call last evening.

"Will you walk into my parlor?"
Said Miss Spleen to the fly.
"Not I," his dumpy answer
As he winked his other eye,
And a housekeeper.

Wise Mr. Fly.
"For your dinky so-called parlor—
Well, it isn't in my line.
I'm nothing but a dining-room;
So none of it for mine."

WILSON'S SHOES.

TOUTED FOR "TAMA" JIM
President John H. Worst of the North Dakota Agricultural College and President of the International Dry Farm Congress.

Fargo, North Dakota.—President John H. Worst of the North Dakota Agricultural College and also president of the International Dry Farm Congress is being honored to all the shoes of "Tama" Jim Wilson as Secretary of Agriculture.

President Worst has made the North Dakota agricultural college one of the most noted institutions of the kind in the United States. He is an enthusiast for the conservation of the soil and his appointment would go far to ward whining back to the Taff administration the former votes that have been estranged through the reciprocity pact.

He is also head of the International Dry Farming congress having been elected at the meeting at Spokane last year.

In speaking of the meeting of the congress which will be held at Colorado Springs, Colo., Oct. 16 to 20, President Worst says that this year's sessions will show some startling developments. That the theory of dry farming which is really intensive cultivation of the soil to retain all the moisture, has proved to be a remarkable success throughout the states that were hit with drought this year.

Adjoining farms where one farm was cultivated in the ordinary way and the other by the dry farming method show almost unbelievable differences in the crops. On some North Dakota farms this year the wheat crop has averaged five to ten bushels to the but cultivated to retain the moisture the wheat has turned out twenty to thirty bushels to the acre.

Blames the Romans.

A sartorial authority says that the custom of dressing for dinner began with the Romans. It was needless to say, a simpler procedure than at present. A loose robe of a fine material was donned for the evening meal, preferably at home, but in cases where guests came from a distance, at the home of the host, he kept a supply of dinner clothes on hand for the use of his guests who came unprovided.

Pretty Sure.

If a man who has a product of his own to sell can continue to think well of it after he has interviewed two or three people who are trying to keep him from finding out that they really want to buy it, he is pretty sure to possess the elements of success.

VAGABOND'S GOSSIP ABOUT JANESVILLE

COMMENTS FREELY ON SUBJECTS THAT HE FINDS OB-JECTIONABLE.

CHANGES ARE NEEDED

Suggests City Officials Look After the Morale of the Youth
of City.

One does not like to continually harp on a subject until it becomes tiresome, but really there is need for improvement in the behavior of the young men and women of the city. Primarily the parents are to blame for not keeping a closer watch on the rising generation that have been given them by the kind Providence to bring into this world and watch grow to men and women. However careful they may be at home, how well taught and schooled, the respectability doesn't end here and their actions on the street, particularly evenings and Sundays, should be looked after, if not by the parents, by the authorities.

It does not help any community to have a crowd of young loafers hanging around the public corners, making comments on the appearance of young girls and women who must pass them. It is not elevating to see a herd of young girls walking arm in arm calling the men and boys and making answer to the remarks. Other cities have an anti-mash law, anti-firting law, which work well, why not Janesville? It is certainly needed. Walk down the streets any evening, particularly Saturday and you will see what I mean. The boys are not vicious, the girls are not bad, it is simply a condition that exists that should not and a good stout bickery club, which by an officer of the law, think it over.

The boy scout movement is one of the best methods to combat this loafing habit on the part of young boys that have come into this country in years. It gives the animal nature of the youth an opportunity to work it out. It interests his mind in the play hours and really teaches independence and self-reliance that is inspiring. Janesville Scouts are really just being organized. Good men are behind the movement, men to whom the most timid mother can well trust their son's care, and it is to be hoped more will join the Janesville organization during the next few months.

It takes the boys out of doors on holidays and after school hours. Teachers then have more time to give them in hand with health-giving nature and puts new ideas into their heads beyond more book learning. It is the boys and girls of today that are the men and women of tomorrow. If parents would remember this they could lessen the pain that comes when they find their children are not their ideals.

But I have taken up too much space with this subject. I want to say something about the city schools. It has long been the boast of Janesville that we have some of the best schools in the state and we have been proud of the fact. The school board, men who devote their time and energy to make them better, to keep up the present standard, asked the council for a suitable appropriation for conducting repairs and improvements. The council at their session Monday quibbled over the sum needed and finally as a compromise topped off one thousand dollars and passed the appropriation.

It is safe to say that the members of the school board, all taxpayers, all men of business ability in the community, bankers, professional men and business men, figured the needs of the schools as closely as they could before making their request. They are not men given to spending money foolishly and their judgment should have been taken and the whole sum asked for appropriated.

Another mistake, in my mind, the council made, was cutting off five hundred dollars from the city library fund.

If any city institution should be encouraged it is this. It is one of the havens of the city that takes the boys and girls from the streets, gives them an opportunity to get good reading matter, supplements their school work, lightens their working hours and makes them better men and women.

Instead of cutting off five hundred dollars the council should have added five hundred to the money at the disposal of the library board and given all to aid possible to this institution. In my mind it was following the penny wise and pound foolish policy to lessen the amount of money this institution is allowed to spend each year. If you are interested drop down to the library yourself and see what they have to offer you. Watch the men and young girls that go there. See the class of reading they ask for and you will be satisfied that it is an institution that deserves financial support.

While on this subject of the young people the great good done by the M. C. A. organizations the country through, and right here in Janesville, should not be overlooked. As I have evidently undertaken to write on the betterment of the boys and girls of the city, let me say right here that in all my travels I have found that the M. C. A. institutions the country through have saved more young men than even the churches have. They throw open their doors to the stranger and take him in. Give him a warm room to enjoy himself in, to read, to play games and good clean men to associate with.

What is needed in Janesville is a Young Woman's Association. In Madison the women of the city have become interested in the working girls' recreation problem and they are taking up the work in earnest. It is safe to say that Madison, even though it has a larger population than Janesville, doesn't have any more working women in its midst than does Janesville. A movement was started some time ago, but inquiry fails to reveal that it really accomplished anything definite.

I hope I have not tired the readers by this long talk on the youths of today, but it is a serious problem. It is something that all parents should think out for themselves. I can suggest one remedy and that is, make the home life so pleasant for the boys and

MARS GLOWS RED IN HEAVENS AT NIGHT

Adelbaran and Pleides Also Shine in Stellar Procession This Month.

During the present month, according to data, the observers in the small hours of the night will discover that the upper sky is studded with a remarkably brilliant collection of planets and stars. At a high altitude the planet Mars, now in one of its honor approaches of the earth, glows like a steady, red lamp. A little farther south the first magnitude star Adelbaran shines also with a ruddy but less light. Grouped close to the latter are the Hyades, and not far distant is the well known cluster of the Pleiades. Farther west is seen the bright planet Saturn shining with a steady, white light. Nearly overhead is the brilliant northern star Capella, while the southeastern sky is adorned by the constellation Orion and many other bright shining points, among which is Sirius, the brightest, all three fixed stars. The planet Jupiter is far removed from all this collection inasmuch as the planet sets soon after the sun and by the close of the month will be lost to view in the neighborhood of the sun. Venus is ascending higher each day as the morning star and on Oct. 22nd reaches its greatest brilliancy. Mercury is too near the sun for observation and on Oct. 23 passes through superior conjunction. An annular eclipse of the sun occurs on Oct. 22 visible only in the Old World. The path of central eclipse crosses central and southern Asia and some of the East Indies.

The times of sunrise and sunset for the month are as follows:
Sunrise—Oct. 1 at 6:54; Oct. 11 at 6:06; Oct. 21 at 6:17; Oct. 31 at 6:40.
Sunset—Oct. 1 at 5:41; Oct. 11 at 6:23; Oct. 21 at 4:07; Oct. 31 at 4:52.
The times of the moon's phases are:
Full moon, Oct. 7 at 10:11, P. M.; last quarter, Oct. 14 at 6:46, P. M.; new moon, Oct. 21 at 10:08, P. M.; first quarter, Oct. 30 at 12:42, A. M.

The principal fixed stars visible during the month are as follows in the evening hours:

To the west, Vega and Altair; to the east, Capella, Adelbaran, the Pleiades, and Formidant.

COLLEGE STUDENTS MAN CATTLESHIPS

65,000,000 to Beautify New York's
Water-Front—Panama Canal
Draws Thousands.

New York, Oct. 4.—The exodus of young American college men to Europe aboard cattle ships this year has been unusually large. It is a comparatively easy matter to obtain a berth on one of these steamer ships and in many cases the amateur sailor receives a return ticket for his labors. A rule has been made recently whereby several of the steamship companies of New York will not take college men or other inexperienced hands as cattle attendants. It is often found unusually hard work and is very trying for inexperienced men who are liable to be a burden. It is found to be cheaper in the end to employ experienced hands and pay them for their services.

A Sea Kitchen.
In order to economize space on the great ocean liners, the modern ship's kitchen is equipped with a variety of ingenious labor-saving devices. A surprising amount of machinery, hundreds of barrels of potatoes, for instance, are packed by self-mechanical means. The dishes are washed and dried without being touched by hands. There are electric coffee mills, special grating machines, cream whipping machines, myonmase mixers, meat-mincing machines, knife cleaners and sharpeners, and blurring heads for polishing silver. All of these are operated by electricity so that the touch of a lever will do the work of a score or more of scullions.

New York's Water-Front.
Elaborate plans have been prepared for improving shipping facilities on the upper section of New York's great water-front, and, at the same time, rendering it attractive. It is proposed to continue Riverside Park over the railroad tracks now exposed, making them virtually a tunnel. The roof of the tunnel will be used as a grand driveway. This would be bordered by an elaborate park. The plan will necessitate an expenditure of $65,000,000. The exposed tracks will be done away with; and the park carried to the bulk-head line will transform the appearance of the shore line.

Canal Draws Thousands.
There is no longer a marked contrast between summer and winter travel to the West Indies. The number of tourists visiting the American Mediterranean throughout the summer has been even greater this year than during the winter months of past years. Since it has been discovered that one may enjoy a sea trip and visit a foreign country in a couple of weeks, while a month earlier one would have to spend a month or more around the Caribbean Sea, thousands of Americans have been quick to take advantage of the opportunity. The approaching completion of the Panama canal also serves to attract Americans southward this season. The steamers have been taken to accommodate the increased traffic. The fall and winter travel will doubtless surpass all records.

Same Opponent for Pothier.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 4.—The Democratic State convention of Rhode Island met here today and named candidates for the State offices to be filled at the November election. Lewis A. Waterman was placed at the head of the ticket as the candidate for governor. Mr. Waterman was the Democratic opponent of Governor Pothier last year and was defeated by a small vote.

HIS BROTHER AND SISTER.

If he has a brother and sister. If not, he is a most unfortunate creature, almost as unfortunate as if he had no parents. If the home is full of children, all the better; and best of all, if they are near to his age as they conveniently can be. They will do more to train him than the average parents and almost as much as the best of parents. The trouble of bringing up an extra boy or two will be more than justified by the extra boyhood they will produce in each one of them.

An only child is at a very serious disadvantage, especially if he is a boy, for a girl can stay in and become a companion of her mother, but a boy has a fermentation going on inside him that he must have some help with, or the house will become too small for him, unless he happens to be not a boy, but only a slay of the male variety.

The "only boy" is apt to be spoiled. His parents will concentrate all their attention on him, instead of distributing it out to a half dozen.

He grows up without that friction between himself and other children, which is so necessary to enable a child to find himself. He has no one to quarrel with, and that is an irremediable loss. He will have a hard time to learn his rights or the rights of others, all by himself, and will need some very excellent parents, to repair the deficit. It must not be said that the "only child" is foredoomed to failures. To be sure, from larger families most of our great men and women have come, and families with an "only child" have furnished more than their ratio of the useless and criminal classes, and yet some "only" children have been great and good. We are only taking averages and indicating probabilities.

An older brother is simply indispensable to the little boy's happiness, and the little brother is an important part of the older boy's life, especially if their ages are close together. If some years are between them, they are both to be pitied. The little one will be pathetically tagging after the older one whose tastes and companions are in advance, his heart aching to follow and breaking because he cannot follow. The older will get out of patience and be rough, but, even so, it is better for either one than to be an only child.

With his sister he cannot well be a perfect comrade for the simple reason that she is a girl and he is a boy, yet there are great enjoyments and training for them both, as they play together and do other things in common.

One peculiar thing is that he gets the benefit of the other children's presence in the house, without being fully aware of it; he may even sometimes think they are undesirable members of the family. From the way they often talk we might imagine they regard each other with deadly and incurable hatred. The showers of verbal missiles they rain down on each other's heads surely portend lifelong disaster to their friendship. But the next moment it is "clear shining after rain." They are, again, confidential allies against foes within and without, whether the older, who foolishly interferes, or another child that dares to taunt them. Disagreements and quarrels they do not regard as incompatible with friendship or good manners. It is not the quarrelling that is always wrong. The noise may be unendurable and require suppression. If a snarling nature is found in a child, it is tragical, a horrible inheritance, likely to become permanent, if daily teased and trained by the example of older members of the family. (God have mercy on them and send in some good friend from the outside to steer their lives into peaceful waters.)

Discord seems unavoidable, and there come two very valuable compensations. One is that they know how to end their troubles without injury, except to the ears and fears of the innocent bystander. Nature attends to it. Interference with their locomotion is usually a failure, and brings only artificial results.

The other compensation is that the children are training each other, even when discordant, provided the discord is only occasional. They are getting experience in applying the principles they have been taught; and they usually succeed, to the satisfaction of both affirmative and negative, plaintiff and defendant, especially, if the principles taught have been illuminated in the practices of their parents. These are contests in skill, and wit and strength that augment those qualities, for through such things, each child learns, by experience, where his rights end; and the rights of others begin; he learns self-control and altruism; learns how to take defeat without whining or tale bearing; learns how to meet outside children and take care of himself, while respecting their rights. In a family of several, no child can be boss or get all he wants or have his own way, as in the "one child" family. Perhaps the boy and his brother and sister are rendering their greatest service to humanity in stimulating in their parents the power of insight and sympathy and self-control in dealing with their children.

HEART TROUBLE

Recently, out in Davenport, Iowa, was a man with a pulsating heart. Local doctors were unable to help him, so he journeyed to Chicago to consult the best specialist he could find on heart troubles. "GO BACK TO THE CHIROPRACTOR" said the specialist, "he is the only one I know who can help you." Surprised, of course, he was, but back he went and today he is a well man—and is a walking, shouting, exponent of Chiropractic Science—the only method of removing the cause of disease through the spine. Every vertebra or spinal bone has its nerve passing through a tiny opening and leading to some organ of the body; these bones slip out of place—pinch the nerve and disease results. Adjust the bones, give free passage of life to that organ and disease disappears just as in the Davenport man's case of heart palpitation.

CHAPTER III.

The Blairtown Soloist.

Blairtown had a population of some eight thousand. There was a Presbyterian church to which Dan and his father went regularly, sitting in the pews when the winter storms beat and rattled on the panes, or in the summer sunshine, when the smell of the pews and the panama hats and the hymn books came strong to them through the heat.

One day there was a missionary sermon, and for the first time in its history, a girl sang a solo in the First Presbyterian church. Dan Blair heard it, looked up, and it made a mark in his life. A girl in a white dress trimmed with blue gossamer, white cotton gloves, and golden hair, was the soloist. He knew her, that is, he had a nodding acquaintance with her. It was the girl at the drug store who sold soda water, and he had asked her some hundreds of times for a "vanilla" or a "chocolate," but it wasn't this vulgar memory that made the little boy listen. It was the girl's voice. Standing back of the yellow-painted rail, above the minister's pulpit, above the flies, the red pews and the panama hats, she sang, and she sang into Dan Blair's soul. To speak more truly, she made him a soul in that moment. She awakened the boy; his collar felt tight, his cheeks grew hot. He felt his new boots, too, hard and heavy. She made him want to cry. These were the physical sensations—the material part of the awakening. The rest went on deeply inside of Dan. She broke his heart; then she healed it. She made him want to cry like a girl; then she wiped his tears.

He Liked Her—Dan Was Well on the Way to Love.

The little boy settled back and grew more comfortable and listened, and what she sang was:

"From Greenland's icy mountains,
From India's coral strand—
Before the hymn reached its end he was a calm boy again, and the hymn took up its pictures and became like an illustrated book of travels, and he wanted to see those peagreen peaks of Greenland, to float upon the icebergs to them, and see the dawn break on the polar seas as the explorers do. . . . He should find the north pole some day. Then he wanted to go to an African jungle, where the tiger, "tiger shining bright," should flash his stripes before his eyes. Dan would gather wreaths of coral from the strand—and give them to the girl with the yellow hair. When he and his father came out together from the church, Dan chose the street that passed the soda fountain drug store and peeped in. It was dark and cool, and behind the counter the drug clerk mixed the summer drinks; and the drug clerk mixed them from that time ever afterward—for the girl with the yellow hair never showed up in Blairtown again. She went away!

CHAPTER IV.

In the Coral Room.

"Mandalay" had run at the Gaiety the season before and again opened the autumn season. Light and charming, thoroughly musical, it had toured successfully through Europe, but London was its home, and its popularity was chiefly owing to the girl who had starred in it—Lettie Lane. Her face was on every postal card, hand bill, cosmetic box and even popular drinks were named for her.

The night of the Oadene box party was the reopening of "Mandalay," and the curtain went up after the overture to an outburst of applause. Dan Blair had never "crossed the pond" before this memorable visit, when he had gone straight out to Oadene Park, London theaters and London itself, indeed, were unexplored by him. He had seen what there was to be seen of the opera bouffe in his own country, but the brilliant, perfect performance of a company at the London Gaiety he had yet to enjoy.

The opening scene of "Mandalay" is oriental; the burst of music and the tinkling of the silvery temple bells and the effect of an extremely blue sea, made Dan "sit up," as he put it. The theatrical picture was so perfect that he lifted his head, pushed his chair back to enjoy it. He was thus close to the duchess. With invigorant-ing young enthusiasm the boy drew in his breath and waited to be amused and to hear. The tunes he already knew before the orchestra began to charm his ear.

On landing at Plymouth Dan had been keen to feel that he was really stepping into the world, and at Oadene Park he had been daily, hourly "soeing life." The youngest of the household, his youth nevertheless was not taken into consideration by any of them. No one had treated him like a junior. He had gone neck to neck with their pace as far as he liked, furnished them fresh amusement, and been their diversion. In all his rare unspoiled youth, Blair had been suddenly dropped down in an effort set that had whirled about him, and one by one out of the inner circle had called him to join them; and one by one with all of them Dan had whirled.

Lord Galorey had talked to him frankly, as plainly as if Dan had been his own father, and found much of the old man's common sense in his fine blond head. Lady Galorey had come to him in a moment of great anxiety, and no one but her young guest knew how badly she needed help. He had further made it known to the lady that he was not in the marriage market; that she could not have him for any of her girls. And as for the Duchess of Breakwater, well—he had whirled with her until his head swam. He had grown years older at the Park in the few weeks of his visit, but now for the first time, as the music of "Mandalay" struck upon his ears, like a ripple of distant seas, he felt like the boy who had left Blairtown to come abroad. He had spent the most part of the day in London with a man who had come over to see him from America. Dan attended to his business affairs, and the people who knew said that he had a keen head. Mr. Joshua Ruggles, his father's best friend, whom Dan this afternoon had left to go to his room at the Carlton, had put his arm with affection through the boy's.

"Don't look as though it were any too healthy down to the place you're visiting at, Dan. Plumbing all right?"

And the boy, flushing slightly, had said: "Don't you fret, Josh, I'll look after my health, all right."

"There's nothing like mountain air," returned the westerer. "These old fogies stick in my nostrils; feel as though I could smell London clean down to my feet!"

From the corner of the box Dan looked hard at the stage, at the fresh brilliant costumes and the lovely chorus girls.

"Gosh," he thought to himself, "they are the prettiest ever! Dove-gray, eyes of Irish blue, mouths like roses!"

Leaning forward a little toward the duchess he whispered: "There isn't one who isn't a winner. I never struck such a box of dry goods!"

The duchess smiled on Dan with good humor. His naive pleasure was delightful. It was like taking a child to a pantomime. She was wearing his flowers and displaying a jewel that he had found and bought for her, and which she had not hesitated to accept. She watched his eager face and his pleasure unaffected and keen. She could not believe that this young man was master of ten million pounds.

When Letty Lane appeared Blair heard a light rustle like rain through the auditorium, a murmur, and the house rose. There was a well-bred calling from the stalls, a call from the pit, and generous applause—"Letty Lane—Letty Lane!" and as though she were royalty, there was a fluttering of handkerchiefs like flags. The young fellow with the others stood in the back of the box, his hands in his pockets, looking at the stage. There wasn't a girl in the chorus as pretty as this prima donna Letty Lane came on in "Mandalay" in the first act in the dress of a fashionable princess. She was modish and worldly. For the only time in the play she was modern and conventional, and whatever breeding she might have been able to claim, from whatever class she was born, as she stood there in her beautiful gown she was grace itself, and charm. She was distinctly a star, and showed her appreciation of her audience's admiration.

At the end of the tenor solo Princess Oitry runs into the pavilion and there changes her dress and appears once more to dance before the rajah and to prove herself the dancer he has known and loved in a café in Paris. Letty Lane's dress in his dance was the classic ballet dancer's, white as the leaves of a lily. She seemed to swim and float; actually to be breathed and exhaled from out her slim gown; and the only ray of color in her costume was her own golden hair, surmounted by a small coral-colored cap, embroidered in pearls. The actress bowed to the right and left, ran to the right, ran to left; glanced toward the Duchess of Breakwater's box; acknowledged the burst of applause; began to dance and finished her pas seul, and with folded hands sang her song. Her beautiful voice came out clear as crystal water from a crystal rock, and her words were cradled like doves, like boats on the boundless seas.

But there was no hymn tune to this song of Letty Lane's in "Mandalay!" To the boy in the box, however, the words, the tune, the dancing of the flow on the window pane, the strong odor of the hymn books and panama hats, came back, and the clear sunlight of Montana seemed to steal into the Gaiety as Letty Lane sang.

The Duchess of Breakwater clapped with frank enthusiasm, and said: "She is a perfect wonder, isn't she? Oh, she is too bewitching!"

And she turned for sympathy to her friend, who stood behind her, his face flumined. He was amazed; his blue eyes ablaze, his head bent forward, he was staring, staring at the Gaiety curtain, gone down on the first act. He laughed softly, and the duchess heard him say:

"Good! Well, I should say who was! She's a girl from our town!"

When the duchess tried to share her enthusiasm with Dan he had disappeared. He left the box and with no difficulty made his way as far as the first wing.

"Can you get me an entrance?" he asked a man he had met once at Oadene, and who was evidently an amateur.

"I dare say. Ripplin' show, isn't it?" Dan put his hands on dual shoulders and followed the nobleman through the labyrinth of files.

"Which of 'em do you want to see, old man?"

Dan, without replying, went forward to a small cluster of lights in one of the wings. He went forward intuitively, and his companion caught his arm: "Oh, I say, for God's sake, don't go on like this!"

But without response Dan continued his direction. A call page stood before the door, and Dan, on a card over the entrance read "Miss Lane." The smell of calcium and paint and perfume and the auxiliary hung heavy on the air. The other man saw Dan knock, knock again and then go in.

Unannounced Dan Blair opened the door of the dressing room of the actress. Miss Lane's dressing-rooms were worth displaying to her intimate friends. They were done with great taste in coral tint. She might have been said to be in a coral cave under the sea, as far as young Blair was concerned. As he came in he felt his ears deafen, and the smoke of cigarettes grew so thick that he looked as though a veil. The dancer was standing in the center of the room, one hand on her hip, and in the other hand a cigarette. Her short skirt stood out around her like a bull, and over the bell fell a rain of pinkish coral strands. She wore a thin slip, from which her neck and arms came shining out, and her woman knelt at her feet strapping on a little coral shoe.

Woman Who Kept Her Vow.

Mrs. Heywood, who has died at Little Bel, near Northwest, at the age of 85, never rode in a railway train. When the Northwest line between Crow and the north was opened she, with others, awaited the passing of the first train through Acton Bridge. Her first impressions were such that she vowed she would never travel by train, and she kept her word.—London Standard.

TO BE TRANSPLANTED TO AMERICAN SOIL. Tattershall Castle, built in the 15th Century by Lord Cromwell, Lord Treasurer of England.

London, England.—Much mystery surrounds the recent purchase by an American millionaire of Tattershall Castle built by Lord Cromwell. It is a tawdry relic of the feudal architecture and according to report is to be taken apart stone by stone, and re-erected in its entirety on Long Island, Paris, France.—William Randolph Hearst, editor of a string of American newspapers, has just left here after a hurried business trip and it is rumored, both here and elsewhere, that no other than Mr. Hearst is the man of mystery who has purchased Tattershall Castle with the idea of carrying it to the United States bodily. The rumor cannot be confirmed.

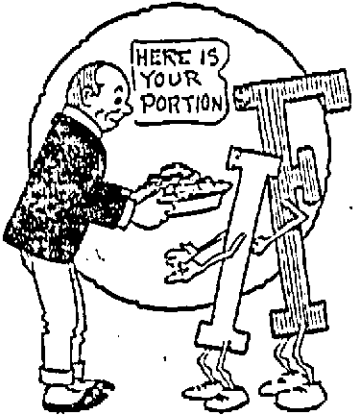

"UNCLE JIMMY" PATTERSON.

Father of most unique contest in the world.

Wheatland, Ill.—For over 35 years "Uncle Jimmy" Patterson, father of the Wheatland Plowing match idea and sage of the community, has been in almost constant attendance at this odd contest where a city bred man would stand about as much chance of winning his barrels as would his rural friend on Wall street. This year the contest, started by a few early pioneers 35 years ago, was one of the gala days of the surrounding community and over 6,000 folk watched 30 knights of the plowshare compete for the world's championship. While much interest was centered in the match, still the over popular "Uncle Jimmy" was over a center of interest to those who had gathered for pleasure, politics and plowing.

The difference between a liar and a humorist is that one distorts a statement and the other states a distortion.

Hats— All Kinds

"For goodness' sake, Lucy, are you starting a battery?" demanded the young woman friend who had called. "No, dear," replied the other young woman, resignedly, "I'm looking over my hats as a sort of warning to myself. I am a victim of relatives—particularly aunts."

"A letter from Aunt Lucy this morning notified me that she will be here tomorrow—hence this outbreak of hats. Some time in the dark ages of my youth I must have mentioned that I never knew what to buy in the hat line. Since then I have been pursued by all my affectionate relatives with kindly meant offers of assistance. I may mention also that my relatives refuse to take a hint, and if I make it stronger than a hint father thinks I am unkind."

"Being a woman and earning my own living makes it impossible for me to be independent—of relatives. If I wore a man I could dress as I pleased and let my aunts rage. As it is, I either offend dad or wear what my aunts think. Why, I think wouldn't do to tell. For I find it expensive to keep the peace."

"Why don't you gently but firmly go and get a hat and let your aunts think what they please?"

"I am going to try that scheme again this afternoon. The last time I asserted myself Aunt Jane didn't like my selection, and it took much longer to return the hat than it did to buy it. This is the hat that we got in its place."

"I've worn it just twice—once on the right ear, once on the left. It would take $50 worth of hair to keep it in place—and my home-grown supply is limited. It cost me $7.50 for each time I wore it. Yet I am not feeble-minded, except in the opinion of my relatives, who are disagreeably strong mentally. If I down one aunt another promptly bobs up—so what's the use?"

"Those two hats on the bed Aunt Dorcas made for me because she thought Aunt Jane had led me into extravagance. The materials cost twelve dollars. Aunt Lucy of New York said they were impossible—our western styles were so provincial. After she began to take notice of my headgear—or rather after she gave notice—hats began to arrive from my many New York cousins. C. O. D. Little notes accompanied them, saying that I might be able to use them for work—meaning that they were good enough for Sunday wear. I was about to refuse the last parcel, but father looked gloved. If I could treat my relatives like friends and speak my mind—but they just give me an injured look and yet they never get mad enough to mind their own hats."

"You poor thing! How silly for them to get offended! I wouldn't allow my best friend to dictate what I should wear. Why don't you wear that stylish hat with the long quill?"

"I did—once. That sword quill nearly blinded a man in the elevator. What he said, after he got through using stronger language, was that I ought to hang a red lantern on that quill. But I had already squandered too much money on the hat, so I put it with the others. You can readily see why I have become so downhearted."

"If they only kept hats in hardware stores I might escape; but let me go into any millinery store during my noon hour or on Saturday, and some kind of mine will bob up. If I look into a window and admire a hat, a voice is sure to say, 'Lucy, are you thinking of getting a hat? I will help you select one. That hat you are looking at is entirely too young for you.' Yet I know this same aunt told Miss Hobbs, who will never see forty again, that the same hat was too old for her. Relatives are honest—when they are speaking to each other."

"Aunt Fannie phoned me this morning that she intended to go with me to select a hat for me, but I took the bit in my teeth and told her that Aunt Lucy had engaged me for the whole season. Then Aunt Fannie got peevish and said it was a thankless job to try to assist people and she tried to help me merely because I had to work so hard."

"Work! I never work so hard as I do when a relative is buying a hat for me. I'm simply a rag. It's certain that Aunt Fannie will wear feathers when she speaks to Aunt Lucy or me and father will blame me. But who isn't lost to the art of hat hunting—she'll bob up next fall. I just can't lose those aunts of mine."

"So your Aunt Lucy is to victimize

you this time?"
"No; didn't I say that I was going to break away from my aunts before they broke me financially and physically? All these hats are going to a rummage sale. I buy a new hat this afternoon—all by myself."
"I've nothing on hand this afternoon. I'll go with you."
"Fit to brute! I thought you were my friend!"
"Oh, if you think my taste isn't good—if you don't trust my judgment—"
"One would think you were a relative of mine from the way you talk."
"I have shopping of my own to do. I certainly shall not trouble you. Good morning."
"Oh, my! If I could only wear a tin pan—or a halo!"
"New I've lost a friend! But I simply can't lose my aunts!"

DODGE THE POSTAGE STAMP

Foreign Countries Devising Schemes for Benefit of Large Users of the Mails.

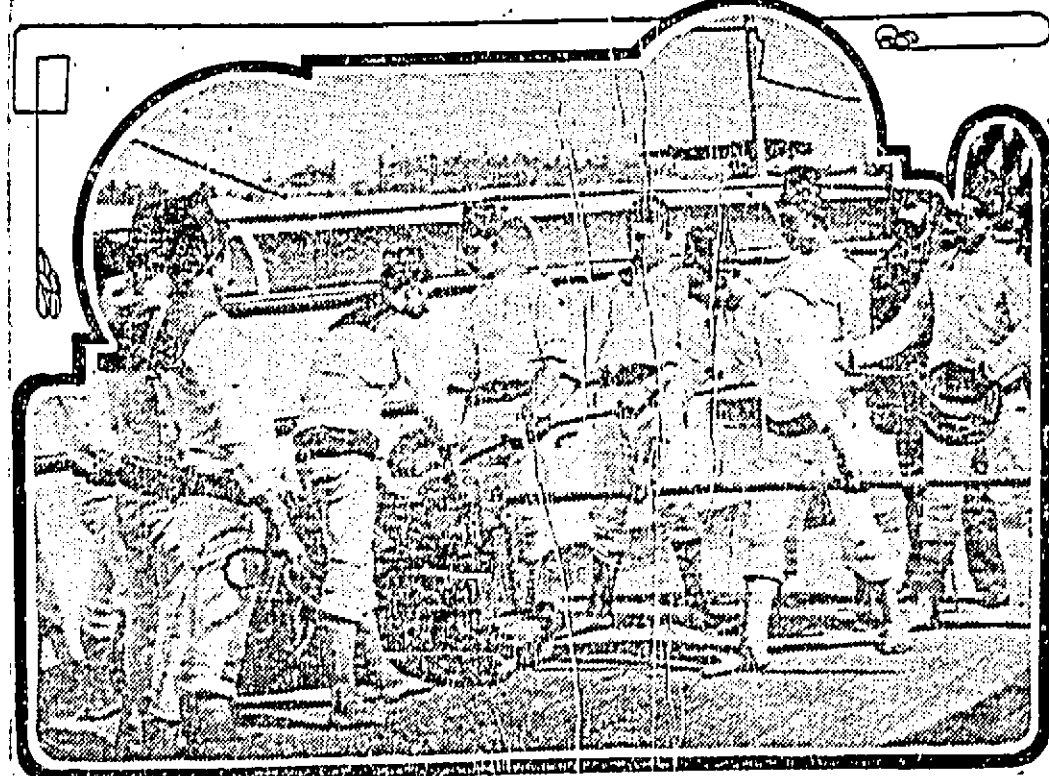

Any man who can devise a practical substitute for the postage stamp will deserve the gratitude of every large business house in the world, and may earn a large fortune. For the labor of affixing stamps to their enormous mail necessitates in some firms the employment of a special clerical staff.

In the postoffices of some countries steps in this direction have already been taken. Here, for instance, newspapers and magazines are mailed by their publishers in bulk without stamps, and the postage is paid in a lump sum of one cent a pound. Then, again, some firms that send out large quantities of circulars register themselves under a certain number at the postoffice, their envelopes are printed with this number and the circulars so mailed are paid for in bulk. In various large consignments of letters may merely be postmarked by machinery and sent without stamps, the postage fee being paid in a lump sum at the time of mailing. It is said that since February 1, 1910, this system has saved the Bavarian postoffice the expense for paper and the printing cost for 10,000,000 stamps.

A writer in the Umschau, a German publication, suggests a further development of this system along the lines of a meter, like those used for water, gas and electricity, in which the letters would be placed and automatically stamped with a postmark, the machine recording each letter so mailed. These machines would be inspected periodically, and the bills collected, just as are those of the consumer of gas or water.

TURKISH SAILORS PREPARING FOR WAR.

The Sultan's navy is vastly inferior to that of Italy, whom she must fight and beat if she would keep Tripoli, the last Turkish possession on the African Continent. The Sultan's warships number only twenty-four, although it is said the Young Turks recently purchased three battleships from Denmark. Italy on the other hand has 181 war vessels.
